For a system adapted to the needs of Quebec's youth: a call from a collective of child-protection organizations

Montreal, February 19, 2020 – Sixteen Quebec civil society organizations working for child welfare and protection came together to call for the Special Commission on the Rights of the Child and Youth Protection to revisit the operating principles and approaches of youth protection services in Quebec. The collective intends to present its proposal at a public hearing of the Commission on February 25, 2020.

In a letter sent to the Special Commission on the Rights of the Child and Youth Protection in December of 2019, the collective of organizations reiterated the importance of involving youth in their cases and taking their opinions into account in order to ensure that the system adapts to their needs, rather than the contrary. This step is part of a collective reflection on youth protection services in Quebec, led by the Commission following the death of a seven-year-old girl in Granby in April of 2019.

The Commission will receive the collective on February 25, 2020, for a hearing in which representatives from the collective will present their arguments and proposals.

The hearing will be open to the public and streamed live on the Commission's website: www.csdepj.gouv.qc.ca/audiences.

Details on the hearing:

Date: Tuesday, February 25, 2020

Time: 4:20pm

Location: 500 René-Lévesque Boulevard West, 9th floor, Montreal (Quebec) H2Z 1W7

About the collective

The collective is composed of sixteen Quebec civil society organizations working for child welfare and protection who decided to join forces to send a strong message around a common goal: to revisit youth protection services in Quebec in order to promote the well-being of Quebec's youth and the respect of their rights. The examination undertaken by the Special Commission on the Rights of the Child and Youth Protection constitutes a historic opportunity to convey this message directly to the Quebec government. The collective is seizing that opportunity.
